THE WALL STREET JOURNAL

The New York Times

Poor Prediction Sinks Fitbit Shares in After-Hours Trading

By REUTERS | Feb 22nd 2016

Shares of Fitbit fell nearly 14 percent in after-hours trading after it estimated that profit would be below Wall Street expectations.

TECHNOLOGY

Mark Zuckerberg Backs Apple in Its Refusal to Unlock iPhone

By MARK SCOTT | Feb 22nd 2016

Speaking at the Mobile World Congress, Mr. Zuckerberg said he was sympathetic to Apple’s resistance to helping the government open a locked phone.

Facebook Open Sources Wireless Gear

By QUENTIN HARDY | Feb 22nd 2016

The social networking giant wants virtual reality everywhere. That means getting hardware costs down.

Nike Founder Gives $400 Million to Stanford Program

By ALESSANDRA STANLEY

Philip H. Knight’s gift is intended to help to recruit graduate students around the globe to address society’s most intractable problems, including poverty and climate change.

European Tech Scene Begins to Feel Silicon Valley’s Woes

By MARK SCOTT

As fears grow in the United States, European start-ups and venture capitalists say the problems are starting to spread across the Atlantic.

Takata Faked Test Data a Year After Airbag Recalls, Report Says

By STACY COWLEY

A Senate report showed Takata officials presenting falsified test data about the design of a new component, illustrating what investigators called a pattern of deceit.

Bill Gates Weighs In on Apple’s Clash With the F.B.I.

By MIKE McPHATE

The Microsoft co-founder said that stopping terrorism is in the public interest, but that government needs must be balanced with privacy safeguards.

The VR company taking you to Mars